Investment Strategy

The Payden Absolute Return Bond Fund's strategy seeks to have positive absolute returns over the long term, regardless of different market environments. To achieve this goal, the fund seeks to provide total return, whether through price appreciation, or income, or a combination of both. It seeks opportunities by employing a flexible approach that evaluates security attractiveness globally, both inside and outside the U.S. A special emphasis is placed on risk management seeking to mitigate potential downside.

Market

- » The fourth quarter was a bright spot in a challenging year for fixed income. Despite a volatile year for emerging-markets (EM) debt, in the last few months of the year, the asset class generated strong positive performance, benefiting from news of China reopening and the fact that most EM central banks were ahead of the developed-market central banks' hiking cycle. In structured products, a more favorable macroeconomic environment highlighted by an approximate 1% decrease in mortgage rates to end the year, was a primary driver for the strong positive performance of residential mortgage credit. Credit risk premiums compressed for the quarter; however, more positive total returns were modestly offset by higher global developed rates (on average).

Outlook

- » While the strategy remains constructive on the structural protections of securitized product, the team has a nuanced view of the asset class and is focused on a more balanced risk allocation with respect to securitized product relative to the combination of corporates and emerging-markets debt. The strategy has become more constructive on interest rates at current levels as the Federal Reserve hiking cycle ages. As economic growth expectations once again become a dominant factor versus inflation, the strategy team has taken steps to improve the liquidity profile of the Fund and is more focused on specific themes and bottom-up item selection rather than broad beta.
